THE BLOOMFIELD CITIZEN.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1889.

Wanted—A Plan.

Streets are the highways of commerce. What railroads, canals, and rivers are to the country at large, streets are to the town or city. Up and down these highways are drawn the heavy loads of the mills, stores, carpenters, masons and farmers, or the pleasure wagons of its well to do citizens. These find the means of communication easy and pleasant, or rough and disagreeable, according as the grades are easy and heavy, and the pavement smooth or broken. The streets are however, more than means of communication. They supply a means of drainage also; not to speak of courses for water pipes, gas pipes, and sewers—good pavements are absolutely essential for the well being of a town or city. But beauty, cleanliness and healthfulness demand that attention shall be paid to the making of proper grades.

In this town a fair amount of attention has been given to all these matters. The main streets have been graded and paved in accordance with maps which are on file in the office of the Township Committee. Monument stones have also been placed in the streets to mark the lines and grades. So far as this has been done it has in the main been well done. There are advantages in doing these things slowly. When but one street is graded at a time, considerable thought is given to the fixing of the grade. The ground is examined, property owners are heard, the natural course of the water is discovered, and the method finally adopted is apt to be as satisfactory as possible. Upon the other hand, if the whole problem of streets, grades, drainage and sewers is turned over to an engineer, to be solved at once by grade map at a fixed price, there is danger that it will be carelessly done. Many of the problems of drainage will be found not to have been solved at all, but merely left for future Town Committees to solve.

Such has been the case with some of the Road Board's avenues. Basins have been formed at the intersection of streets where there is no escape for the surface water. Changes of grade have been made, as at the Centre, which have caused large expense for lowering or raising adjoining streets and buildings.

A general plan for the grading and macadamizing of streets is greatly needed. To grade one street without taking into consideration the needs of intersecting streets is a wasteful system of public improvement. The peacemeal plan of grading has probably gone long enough and should be succeeded by a general plan suited to the needs of the present day. Such a plan should cover only the more thickly settled portion of the township, should be done by a competent engineer, under the careful supervision of the Township Committee.

Good judgment is an essential element of good engineering. Cost is also to be considered, in determining the amount of grading to be done. While the main avenues should be wide and straight, with easy grades, there is less necessity for heavy grading in the suburbs. A good plan should consider the problem of drainage of the whole town, so as to promote its beauty, healthfulness, cleanliness, and travel. It should also look to the time not far distant when sewers shall be built for the drainage of the more thickly settled part of the town. Such a plan may be expensive, but it would be exceedingly useful. It would be easy to secure a plan that would be cheap but of no practical value.

The Liquor Business.

Constable John V. Smith, acting under orders from the Township Committee, served notice on the saloon-keepers who are selling under government licenses that they must take out a retail license or quit the business. The following saloon-keepers were notified: Joseph Hall, Prospect, corner of Thornton street, Edward Wright, corner of Prospect street and Myrtle avenue, Mrs. Degnan, Second street near Thomas, Mrs. Carroll and Mrs. Brook, on Liberty street. The two latter said that they intended going out of business. Mrs. Degnan had nothing to say in the matter. Mr. Wright is endeavoring to obtain license, and Mr. Hall emphatically declared that he was not violating any of the provisions of his government license. The government license feature is one of the greatest obstacles in the way of the enforcement of laws for restriction of the liquor traffic. Under cover of its protection, unprincipled persons violate the state and local statute and defy the authorities. There is a growing public sentiment that the National government ought to materially modify or altogether abandon this feature of its revenue. In addition to an immediate nuisance on the community the government licensed saloon enters into an unjust competition with dealers who comply with the State and local requirements of the law. The Township Committee have taken a step in the right direction in endeavoring to exterminate them. Their action means extermination to some of these saloons. It is not likely that a sufficient number of Freeholders will be found who are willing to lend their names towards increasing the number of legitimate saloons now in operation in the town.

St. Mark's M. E. Church.

This Church was organized October 24, 1881, by the colored people of Montclair, and through the kindness of the Methodist M. E. Church has had the use of the old Church building on Bloomfield avenue below Elm street. Recently these people have become ambitious of owning the property, and their laudable desire for independence and permanence has been met by an arrangement through which the Church edifice is to be put in complete and thorough repair at a cost approximating $1,000. The work has been commenced, and when complete there will be no more comfortable and commodious Church house in Montclair or Bloomfield. In consideration of these repairs and improvements a lease has been given them for five years from November 1st without rent accompanied with an option of purchase at any time during the term at $2,000, additional. During the eight years of the existence of the Church society these people though poor have made no public appeal for aid, but with the assistance of a few friends who have contributed annually through D. F. Merritt and their treasurer, Edward A. Smith, they have paid their own way at a cost of $800 to $1,000 per annum.

There has been a congregation of from 100 to 200, occasionally rising to 250. The colored population of Montclair has grown steadily and is rapidly increasing, and it is a wise forethought to provide permanent and attractive facilities for education in morals and religion. The movement is a conservative one quite as much in the interest of the towns of which they become citizens and of the families of which they form a part as it is of these people themselves. Rev. Amos Gunther, their Pastor, has the entire confidence of all who know him, and is laboring judiciously and well to make the effort a successful one. The Sunday-School is under the superintendence of a veteran of such work, John W. Snedeker of Bloomfield. A large proportion of its members are adults, many of whom have learned to read while in the school. With the assistance of a few more devoted teachers such as have labored in the field for years, its membership and influence might easily be doubled.

Mr. D. F. Merritt an earnest friend of the colored folks, is acting as treasurer for the improvement and building fund, and will see that all contributions are properly applied. Associated with him in the work are S. Roland, J. W. Snedecker, and E. A. Smith, who with Carlin Lawson, J. A. Berry and Rev Amos Gunther form a committee to take charge of the work. The moral influence of this movement is not confined to Montclair and Bloomfield, as the frequent visitations and constant correspondence between the colored people here and their friends in the ancient commonwealth of Virginia, whence most of them come, is vastly stimulating and is producing evident effects there. The small proportion of violence and crime resulting from the introduction of so many of the race into Montclair, Bloomfield and vicinity is greatly to their credit and not a little is due to the influence in the St. Mark's M. E. Church.

Those who desire to assist in this worthy effort can contribute through either of the parties named and rest assured that the money will be judiciously expended. A word of caution, however, may not be inappropriate, as a man calling himself "Merrett," or "Harry," and sometimes other names, has been collecting money in Montclair and Bloomfield who is a fraud and never had connection with this Church or Congregation. F. A. SMITH.

AN ASIATIC CREW.

Curious Habiliments, Manners and Customs of an East Indian Ship's Crew.

The British steamship Astor Hall, which arrived here a few days ago from Liverpool with a cargo of salt and phosphate, now being unloaded at the Queen and Crescent wharf, is the object of much interest in the Third district at present. The cause of attraction is the crew of the vessel, one of the most unique seen here for some time, cosmopolitan as New Orleans rightfully claims to be. The sailors in question comprise forty-six Mohammedans, whose garments of white cotton with red turbans for headgear contrast strongly with the copper colored visages of the wearers. The weather yesterday was not particularly warm, and the sight of the crew as they were at work discharging the cargo in summer attire was calculated to send a chill down the back of the most indifferent observer. The peculiarities of the people, however, are not confined exclusively to their dress, but also apply to their habits and customs, which are even more markedly singular. They eat no beef nor pork, and all food consumed by them must be prepared, cooked and served by people of their own race.

Two casks are employed by the ship for this purpose. They fare principally upon rice and curry, huge pots of which are cooked daily for their use, and served with unvarying monotony for breakfast, dinner and supper. The rice is boiled after their own methods, and the curry pounded in the primitive style which prevailed among them a thousand years ago. A queer idea with them is that the hand of the stranger is sacrilegious and contaminates their food, which would be immediately disdained if ever subjected to the simple touch of any other race. This also applies to their cooking utensils and all cooking implements employed by them. Sometimes for a change they eat mutton, but the sheep must be killed by their butcher secretly, so that even the eye of the Christian may not gaze upon the slaughter.

With some tribes of the race the idea is even carried still further, the shadow of a Christian falling upon their food unfitting it for use. A visit to their quarters in the forward end of the ship revealed the fact that, though cleanliness is one of the injunctions of the Mohammedan faith, they were palpably ignorant of its desirability for its own sake. The room in which they were gathered at the evening meal was their sleeping quarters, and also served as a smoking room and pantry, as revealed by portions of a quartered sheep, which was suspended from the ceiling.

The air was heavy with the fumes of tobacco smoke of a peculiar flavor, produced from cheroots, which such of the sailors who had finished their evening meal were puffing vigorously. Perhaps one of the most curious features of the reporter's visit was the sight of these people at supper. Eight or ten men were seated tailor fashion around a large basin of rice, in the center of which was a curry sauce of about the consistency of honey.

The Hindoostanese would dip his right hand into the dish, unmindful of table etiquette, and, rolling up into a wad about a handful of the rice, would flavor it with a little curry and then transfer the morsel to his mouth. His neighbor would then proceed to do likewise, until the whole circuit was completed. The interpreter, who accompanied the reporter, stated that the men never used the left hand in eating, and that before and after each meal they cleaned their mouths thoroughly.

They possess fine teeth, a distinguishing feature which is found even among the aged. While the Mohammedan creed enjoins that they shall offer prayer to Allah four or five times a day, they have, sailorlike, grown indifferent to the strict decrees of their religion. They are very cleanly, however, and bathe every day, no matter how cold the weather may be. They are, of course, teetotalists, it being a breach of their religious faith to touch the tempting arrac.

As sailors, they were said to compare unfavorably with the English in proportions of four to one, and in cases of emergency two English sailors were worth a boatload of them. This was due to the fact that they were fatalists pure and simple, and that nothing could alter the mysterious workings of Allah. The Mohammedans speak only Hindostanee, and were engaged at Bombay about three months ago, the agreement in shipping articles being that they should be returned to that port at the expiration of twelve months.

At every new moon the Asiatics dance and sing, their peculiar exercises being held at sunrise and sunset.

This is the first trip of the steamship Astor Hall to this port, having previously been engaged in the Bombay trade from Liverpool.—New Orleans Times.

Gifts to the Samoans.

In connection with the distribution of rewards to the followers of Mataafa, the Samoan correspondent of a Sydney paper writes: "The American congress having voted $5,000 in recognition of the generous efforts of the Samoans to save life during hurricane, the money was received here last mail by the United States consul, $1,000 in gold watches and presents, and $4,000 in gold. After a careful consideration of the claims of the chiefs and the men assisting, the money and presents were distributed on the 16th. Each of the high chiefs received a gold watch, and Mataafa one of each of the other articles distributed, which were clocks, barometers, thermometers, etc. A good deal of amusement was caused by the efforts of the chiefs to understand the use of the latter articles. One of them to whose lot a large wall barometer had fallen listened attentively to the careful description of its virtues, given by an old sea dog present, and said at last he thoroughly understood all about it. 'Very fine thing,' said he; 'but I want the key to wind it up.' This timely distribution of money will go far to allay the distress among Mataafa's followers, for food has been very scarce lately, also the wherewith to purchase it."—London Tablet.

Ours is a practical age. The old motto, "Trust in God and keep your powder dry," has been translated by an Iowa farmer thus: "Boys, don't touch those melons, for they are green, and God sees you."—Boston Congregationalist.

REDUCTION IN BEDROOM SUITS.
For this reason? Having manufactured largely and bought heavily for the fall trade, but on account of my extensive alterations, and being put back one month by the weather, masons, carpenters, painters and elevator not left me with a large stock on hand. I will make the following reductions to reduce stock:
Parlor Suits in all kinds of Plush, regular price $75, reduced to $60.
Parlor Suits in Plush, regular price $60, reduced to $45.
Black Walnut Bedroom Suits, regular price $75 reduced to $60.
Black Walnut Bedroom Suits, regular price $60 reduced to $45.
Antique Oak Bedroom Suits, regular price $50, reduced to $37.50.
Antique Oak Bedroom Suits, regular price $37.50 reduced to $27.50.
My stock of PARLOR STOVES and RANGES is not surpassed in the city for novelties and low prices.
